BIMETALLISTS are dubbed Bimaniacs by

Mr. LABOUGEBEE in Truth of the 13th ul "It may be laid down as an incontrovertible proposition," he says, " that there can be no permanent fixed ratio, based on respective values, between any two articles, unless both the ratio of consumption and the ratio of production of the one to the other be the same. A ratio of value can; however, be artificially established by law. A State or States can agree to exchange gold against. silver at a fixed rate, in precisely the same Rules of H.B.M. Supreme and other Courts way as they might agree to exchange all barley against wheat at a fixed rate. It is evident, however, that if a certain number of pieces of silver were arbitrarily made of equal monetary value to a certain number of pieces of gold, and if the pieces of silver could be produced at less cost than the pieces of gold, every one would provide himself with pieces of silver, and gold would disappear." Several columns are devoted to a disquisition on this text, and an at-Customs and Harbour Regulations for the dif- tempt is made to show that the Bimetallists are of all men the most foolish. It must be admitted sean abstract proposition that there can be no absolutely fixed ratio, based on respective values, between gold and silver but what is of practical moment is to ascertain whether the deviation in values is so great that the two cannot be used concurrent ly for currency purposes. Mechanicians bave to deal with metals that expand and contract with the temperature, and yet they are able to adapt them to the nicest possible calculations, because the variation is slight and a margin is allowed for it. Bimetallists maintain that the variation in the relative velues of the precious metals, if both were: freely used as currency, would not be sufficient to disturb the equilibrium. There is the fact, however, to be faced, that whereas silver in 1873 was worth 60d. per ounce, it is now worth only 42d.; this is made much of by Mr. Labouchess and those who ! think with him. But the cause of the fall on the 19ta ins. is not, as they appear to think, over production of silver, but the demonstration of the metal. If gold were demonetised the price of that metal would fall just as that of silver has. The demand for it as currency given to gold a certain proportion of its value, as it did also to silver placed on the Australian line at the end of the "he shipments by the East Asian line amounted to 20.989 cable metres from Brenigrhaten, Antwerp 5.950, Genoa 742. Of the fortnight and have a little outing. In fact so for going 12,609 went to Hongkong and 10.675 cubic metres to Shanglai. On the homeward pussages 7,850 cable metres were received from Shanghai, and 10,410 cubic metres from Hongkong. Of the total quantity of goods shipped in East Asia for Europe, 4:543 cubic metres were for Genos, 11,973 for Antwerp, and 15,907 for Bremerhaven. In what relates to the description of goods carried from Germany and Europe in general they are without exception piece gnode; heavy goods such as raw-iron, coment, etc. being excluded. Indian goods, cionamon and other tropical productions. .

The general conclusions which may be drawn from the figures above given are the following. At the outset, as it was to be foreseen, the results have clearly shewn that these lines have not furthered the interests of England and Belgium. which their opponents declared would without doubt be the case, but that on the contrary the goods sent by the German steamors represented so much withdrawn from English shipowners and commission houses. The capacity of the lines to develop is more than proved. The increasing importance of the trafficbetween Germany and the extreme points of the voyages have for some time shown the necessity of baving a more complete services forthwith, at least to Eastern Asia. The offers of freight at the intermediate ports, particularly at Colombo and Singapore, are constantly greater than the space at disposal. The figures representing the direct imports from China, India and Australia to Bremerhaven are particularly worthy of attention. These figures include a quantity of raw stuffs particularly from the last two countries, for which a German market had long been desired. This especially applies to

Australian wool. The selection of Genos as a port of call has proved extraordinarily successful for both lines, the goods discharged there on the homeward voyage, immediately find more than andicient to replace them in the Italian goods intended for Germany; Genca is indispensably necessary for the passenger traffic. In the last named particular the German East Asian line has completely surpassed the English and French lines, and the same result may be expected at the end of the year in the Apstralian line:

This road would conmeet the so-called Oberhaupt, or highest point of Pilatu, with the Klimsenhorn. The object would be to make the ascent of the mountain easier for tourists coming from Hergiewyl. The difference in level between the two points is set down at 194 metres; the distance between them at 465 mètres. The road apparatus (for such it must be called) would consist of six wire cables, quite independent of one another, on which six light pulley wheels will move, and from these wheels a small omnibus capable of carrying eight persons will hang. The omnibus will be drawn by a rope attached to a steam ongine to be placed on the Oberhaupt, near the Bellevue Hotel.

Mr. Vanderbit's kitchen is really very beautiful to the eye: The purity of marble; the lastre of tiles, and the gleam of metal, are what one sees. The walls are lined with creamenamalled tiles, and all the angles are covered with brass mouldings. Where these meet the doors and windows they are covered with these metal mouldings, dispensing even with wooden trim. The celling is made of white enamelled tiles set in cement. But one does not imperil the head of a 10,000 dollar cook with a loosely set brick, so each tile is also seoured with raised metal bolts. According all this gleam of white and metal is the large double range. They neither wash nor comb their hair, and they wear dirty, flithy garments year in and year out. Esquimaux means "raw fish eater." their diet is chiefly fish and game, kept until it is in a state. of putrefaction, when to them it is most delicious. Raw blubber of the whale is a great delicacy. Their manner of eating is dog-like, Fixing their testh in a piece of blubber, with a dull knife they saw off the portion which the mouth will not admit. The men hunt and fish, while all other work is done by the women. They know nothing of marriage vows; they cobabit. separate, and take new partners at pleasure, one man often having a succession of wives. The eldtime costom of tatooing the face, arms, and breast is still practised. The women wear ivory studs in the lower lip, in which is inserted their newing-needle for convenience when not in use. The men also have these apertures with bone or ivory stads in their ears, in which rings are inserted. This same fashion prevails largely in South-Eastern Alaska.

POST-OFFICE NOTICES.

When Correspondence has been mis-sent or delayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addresses need do is to note on the cover, Sent to --- or Received 12 at 7 p.m., or as the case may be, and forward in without any other writing whatever, to the Postanaster-General. This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives more trouble in the end.

In consequence of the interruption on the Framway there will be only one Peak delivery daily. Letters and parcels may be posted in through l'assengers (First sloon only) at re- Sunday delivery. the General Post Office up to 12 o'clock. No

The Postal Guide for 1809, revised to date. will be found in the Daily Press Directory, p. 739 of both editions, is the only authorised complete Summary of Postal information published in Hongkong. The authorised List of Mails issued in connection with this paper is the one published twice each day in our Extra, which is always corrected to a much later hour than that given
